

Law Graduate Programme

Our graduates join us having completed their College of Law (COL) studies.

This means that depending upon your workload, you may choose to commence your COL studies part time (30 weeks) while still studying at university. Alternatively, you may prefer to finish your degree and then embark on your COL studies full time (15 weeks). Additional information on the COL course timetable is available at www.collaw.edu.au. Allion covers the COL course fees.

The most common feedback we receive from our lawyers about our graduate programme is that they get to do quality, complex legal work well beyond what their peers are doing at other firms including the larger national and international firms. You will also work closely with our clients and our partners, allowing you to accelerate your learning and develop a level of commerciality much earlier in your career. Apart from the obvious career benefits, this type of working environment delivers a high level of challenge, enjoyment and engagement.
